Chase Sternhagen is a Junior at the University of Northern Iowa. At 7 years old, he was diagnosed with FSGS and underwent his first kidney transplant at age 12. His mother donated her kidney to him by becoming a living donor. This past winter, Chase was told his previously donated kidney was failing and that he was in need of another transplant. After going through dialysis, numerous medical tests, and several hospital stays, Chase has received a new kidney! Although that is amazing news, Chase still has regular appointments every two weeks and also has monthly infusions to treat a virus that he has been dealing with since the transplant.
